Keyboard macro recorder. Keystrokes you make on your keyboard are recorded on your computer. You can easily replace the macro you just recorded with the next command and your computer will perform it. Simple and easy to use. Keyboard macros can be performed while typing or reading documents and, thanks to the hot keys you configure on your keyboard, you can automate tasks you perform regularly on your computer. With KeyMacro you can record all the hot keys that you use and automatically perform any of them on your computer. Keymacro has an easy and intuitive interface that you can personalize to suit your needs and your own personal preferences. Keymacro is a multifunctional application. You can: Record hot keys that you make on your keyboard, and then replace them with another hot key when you're done; Record any text on your screen (the text of any window, the contents of any document) and then copy it to the clipboard to paste it somewhere else; Copy and paste the text of any window, the contents of any document, or the text in any hotkey you have recorded, to other applications; Record hotkeys in windows you work with (Microsoft Word, Microsoft Excel, Web browsers, etc.) and then reuse those hotkeys to work on any of your documents or to perform any task you have in mind. KeyMacro is a multifunctional application that records any text that you see on your screen (both the desktop and the contents of any window, document or hotkey you have created) and automatically copies it to the clipboard when you press a hot key. You can then paste this text into any application or to other files. KeyMacro can easily be used with any application: it works with Microsoft Word, Microsoft Excel, Web browsers, etc. It also records the text of any hotkey you create. The application can be used as a keyboard macro recorder or as a clipboard manager. Once recorded, the hotkey can be used whenever you want to type the text that was recorded. A hot key can be composed of any character or special keystroke. KeyMacro is a keyboard macro recorder with a totally visual interface. It can record any text (the contents of any window, document or hotkey you have created) and paste it into any application with a single keystroke. You can configure which hot keys are recorded and, as often as you want, you can replace a hot key with a new one that you specify. The hot keys you create can

I want to take in a line of text, validate it, and if it fails, I want to return an error message to the user. I need to read a line of text, if it is valid, pass it on to a different function. If it isn't valid, I need to return a failure message to the user and stop execution. How do I do this in python? My code is below: def get_item(input): item = input() if is_valid(item): do_it() else: return_error_message() def is_valid(input): return input == "1" A: You can just wrap the validation in a function (in Python 3): def is_valid(input): return input == "1" def
