Check out our new terms of service, and check out How We Work!It's the day after the Full Moon in Pisces, and a new crop of twelve Lunation stations are appearing in the sky. These stations should be in the main constellations of Cancer, Leo, and Scorpio: Cancer on the 23rd, Leo on the 24th, and Scorpio on the 25th. Which ones will be where?To find them, you can use an online visual astrologer, or simply download a free pdf from Nautilus Astrology, and see if you can find the Lunation stations by eye. The following one-minute video demonstrates what it looks like to look for Lunation stations with an astro-geeky graphic overlay: If you'd like to find a full list of the stations, and look them up in the online Astrolabe, click here: Exact locations on the Nautilus Astrolabe.Or just look at the excellent post I wrote about Lunations stations here: Where Will The New Moon Find Its Station? If you're a new subscriber to the Astrology Corner, and want to see more features, you can upgrade today at any time. On the left side bar there is an update box. Click it, and you can see a list of all the features that will be available at the new price. You get the new Sunday Astrology Corner for only $10/month, or $15/month with the Astrological Oasis. If you're worried about the server failure, or just want a backup copy of this week's video, you can click here to download a zip file of the HD version of the video. Happy New Moon to you all!
