Open.Distribution and expression of connexin26 in amphibian embryos and association of ectodermic gap junctional intercellular communication with cardiac differentiation in Xenopus embryos. The distribution and expression of gap junction protein connexin26 (Cx26) in the central nervous system of the marine amphibian, Xenopus, were investigated. In stage 32 Xenopus embryos, Cx26 immunoreactivity is observed in all parts of the central nervous system (CNS), including in cells migrating into the spinal cord at the level of the neural tube. Cx26 in the neural tube is limited to the ventricular layer, where it is concentrated in the floorplate. In the spinal cord, Cx26 is localized throughout both gray and white matter. In stage 34 embryos, Cx26 is expressed in the floorplate and in the ventral portion of the neural tube of all embryos examined. In stage 37 embryos, Cx26 expression was observed in the ciliary marginal zone (CMZ) of the retina of all embryos examined. In stage 37 embryos, immunolabeling of Cx26 in the CMZ appeared to be congruent with intracellular labeling of gap junctions in electron microscopy studies. In addition, in stage 38 embryos, Cx26 was observed at the two poles of the tailbud, a structure considered to be a remnant of the neural tube. At these stages, Cx26 was also expressed in the anlagen of the cardiac chambers, the pharyngeal pouches and the hypochord. In stage 41 embryos Cx26 is expressed in the presumptive myocardium. In stage 41 embryos, the expression of Cx26 in the CMZ is coextensive with the expression of Oct4/Sox2, a marker of the CMZ. These data support the idea that Cx26 is necessary for proper expression and patterning of the CMZ in Xenopus embryos.Harvard law professor Alan Dershowitz told CNN's Brooke Baldwin on Monday that it is "time for liberals and conservatives to come together to pass a bipartisan bill that would prosecute hate crimes against Jews" amid a dramatic rise in anti-Semitism around the country. As one of the most tenured professors at Harvard Law School, Dershow
