According to the official website, "AutoCAD Serial Key is a scalable, extensible, 3D computer-aided drafting application designed to automate the process of conceptual design. It offers users the best software for designing 2D, 3D and Vector graphics, along with powerful 3D modeling tools." It can import and export: SVG, DWG, DWF, VRML, Adobe Flash SWF, Adobe AIR SWF, SVG, Adobe Flash SWF, BMP, JPG, GIF, PNG, and WebP. The native file format is the DWG format, but AutoCAD has the ability to exchange DWG files with other popular software including Revit, ArchiCAD, Inventor, VectorWorks, and Parasolid. AutoCAD is a popular choice for architectural and mechanical engineering, for printing, graphic design, and for computer-aided animation and video games. What we didn't mention was that the team at Jagex was actively developing the program, but we now know that they were ready to go live yesterday. So we're happy to inform you that you can give this a try with today's Patch 5.2.5. When the game comes online at 6am PDT, you'll be able to witness the Mists of Pandaria opening through the lens of the Alliance and the Horde, and be able to use special interface screens to access the content that players in the beta experienced. At the time the beta ended, you didn't have access to the new content in Pandaria, though, so you'll have to accept the new content when it launches. Blizzard previously revealed that the entirety of the new continent would be available to players in the launch of Patch 5.2, and it seems the content was already in the game since a few days after the beta ended. The Horde server is currently playing the game from ca3bfb1094
