The world is ruled by the Northmen, but in a peaceful time, the country is prosperous and the lands rich in rewards. Your journey begins with you being placed on an adventure in search for a golden artifact, the "Sneak!Chess!Chess!" of the words. It is your job to take this item back to your people, the Northmen. After being in the service of the Northern Kingdom for over a year, you leave to return home. Your guide, Celine, tells you that the Northmen are going to war with the Kingdom of Eastern Kingdoms. This is not a good thing, but it doesn't matter to you because you still have the gold and you're sure to get reward in the war for saving your country. This is just another golden opportunity to explore new lands and new adventures, but destiny has some plans for you. Players will be able to play as any of the main characters and ally units, with the exception of the foot soldiers. There will be units, it's content, and skills for all 4 factions to use. Players will be able to fight in real-time battles against an enemy nation. To see what that means, we currently have a map that is being used for prototyping, testing, and development. It's still a work in progress, but it's nearly 100% complete. As we test out the game, we will be adding features that we think players will enjoy. The players will be able to level up their units, upgrade their weapons, learn more skills and abilities, and gain more experience points for those skills to increase their military quality. Additionally, players will be able to do more than just fight. They will be able to construct buildings, craft units, research new technology to develop, gather resources to build and upgrade, and maybe even walk around outside! Players will also be able to become an "in-game GM" and host training sessions for the other players. Game "Story of Colossal" Gameplay: The game focuses on the story, and taking over to change it. Players start as a tiny unit, eventually gaining allies and growing in strength along the way. They will also be able to have descendants. Players will also be able to gain more money, and more potent equipment, weapons, and vehicles to help them rule over their nation. Early Access will be released on STEAM, and the game will cost $9.99. Enjoy! Location: Los Angeles Member since: Jan 29, 2011 Skills: Writer Albert Camus aka Zoml Let me get this straight. You are doing RPG's with a basis in Real-Time Strategy. That means the player starts off as little unit until they gain more strength and usefulness. This sounds really complicated. PSL Teamworks Management Location: SKA-78Wonnok36erDom Member since: Aug 6, 2009 Skills: Team Management, Investment Zoml I've played the original Colossal Saga game, and it's OK, but I'm not a fan of turn-based strategy. I think the idea of RPG's should be that you make all your decisions in real-time. If you want to read a book before an important meeting,

By AMISHAdventure on June 4, 2009 Adventurer's League website does a great job of laying out the basic rules of wandering. Without delving into the rule-book, here's an account (based on my experience) of what wandering entails. Consider that those who wander tend to have a knowledge of the world beyond the walls of the cities they dwell, and they either take this with them or leave it on the local road. Where they head next depends on the purpose of their wanderings. A farmer will more likely continue to expand their fields, a hunter will more likely head into the wilderness to hunt. It also makes sense that those who are in the midst of a journey tend to end up where they started. Some might want to continue with the hunt, others as you say, travel onwards. I find this to be true: the great trade network of the world has in many ways denied "towns" of most of their reason to exist: people currently go straight where the easiest, shortest route from A to B is. One of the jobs of the world's great merchants is usually to move off the beaten tracks between major trade paths; in this way they help the villagers keep their farms, and keep their hunt away from the wolves. The shopkeepers of the city help maintain the safety of their houses, and by so doing bolster the self-supporting roles of the merchants and other wanderers on their journeys. Very few people wander purely for adventure's sake. Most people wander for some greater purpose; and I think the larger the assignment, the more likely is it to be kept longer than a week, and until you finish it, you are going to have to maintain your forward movement. Though I can't come up with any evidence to support the thesis. There's just something about walking that defies stereotyping. After reading a lot about the Celts I have concluded some things based on the description of them in those texts. - Their favorite curse word was "screw", This is what they usually used to escape into a fantasy world of brax. - The Celts were a warrior group, and this became mostly blood first and foremost. This sounds like my own experience wether I was born in central europe, and to begin with I did travel a lot. I have sometimes been chased in the woods,
