"We have already written to ASU and asked them to stop their illegal activities.ASU's Malaysian affiliation broke several existing labor laws as it violated several core labor laws, said NU.For starters, NU said that the International Rice Research Institute has highlighted the role of ASU in the increase of rice imports and the consequent inflation in the country."The institute also stated that, the cost of human lives is a price to be paid for cheap rice and that crops would not grow without rain," said NU.In addition, the institute also stated that rice is an important staple for the millions of Malaysians.Q: How to get a compact string (base64) from a JPEG in node.js? How do you convert a JPEG (in base64 form) into a plain text string in node.js? I'm aware of base-64decode and jpeg-js. A: Disclaimer: I don't know whether nodejs can play with JPEG, not being a JPEG expert, I'm not able to guess jpeg-js is based on JpegLib, which is a C implementation and thus with its binaries, not being an expert in C I would suggest to try a generic solution. You can try a node package to encode/decode binary data: const jpegjs = require('jpeg-js') const binaryDataToText = (data) => { const pad1 = 16 const pad2 = 13 const num = data.byteLength const size

The filter is controlled with a slider. At some point, the slider might be made to read "All", which would make all of my data available. At some other time, it might be made to read "March", which would limit the data to the March set of data. How can I change my code so that the number of data points in the graph changes depending on the number of data points that are available? Here is my code that does not currently work: //Create a top level container var svg = d3.select("#map").append("svg:svg") .attr("width", width + margin.right + margin.left) .attr("height", height + margin.top + margin.bottom) .append("svg:g") .attr("transform", "translate(" + margin.left + "," + margin.top + ")") .call(xAxis); //Create an y axis var yAxis = d3.svg.axis() .scale(y) .orient("left"); //Create the Zoom control, svg.append("g")

.attr("class", "zoom") .call(zoom); //Create a filter. If all data is available it will be hard coded to work as such: var xFilter = d3.

O, S eé é thMark Menezes will have "steering and braking issues" as he returns to the F1 circuit for the first time since he walked away from the sport in 2010. The 38-year-old Brazilian, who is now director of motorsport at Red Bull Racing, spent four years as a deputy team principal for the Milton Keynes-based team. He was leading RB11 until an error at Silverstone left the car sideways at the braking area, which led to a crash. "When I came back to my home city of Milton Keynes, I used to go back to old haunts," Menezes said. "I used to go to Brands GP track, which is the old site now - it's the FIA's test track - and I remember walking around on the paddock, bumping into people that I used to work with. "I remember going around the old Brands paddock and I was reading on Twitter that Charles Pic was there, so I just drove by and out of sheer coincidence of fate I just saw him walking around and gave him a big hug. "I got back from my holiday just before the Abu Dhabi GP and looked on Twitter and saw that the guys were saying that Charles Pic had been taken to hospital, so I thought 'what the hell' and checked on the WhatsApp group. I had a text from Charlie's dad saying that he was in hospital and I knew it was serious. "I spoke to Charlie's dad and when he told me he was going to be rushed to hospital I knew exactly where he was. I thought maybe it was an accident that involved the Williams. But then they were saying that it was a red flag injury and that it's going to be a serious injury. "There were so many rumours going on and I didn't want to believe it. I went to the hospital to see how serious he was. The doctors said he had very little chance of making it. I was in shock. I was like 'I don't believe it' - it was the way it was."
