I'm trying to learn Qt5 from the official documentation. The first step in that process is creating a signal that can be received by a slot. It can also be received from a different slot by emitting it as a public signal: But what if you want to bind the values coming from one widget to another? I'm going to give an example: Imagine a Qt4 GUI that contains the following: QFrame that contains a button. QFrame that contains a QLineEdit. What I want to be able to do is to pass the value of the QLineEdit to the QFrame. The first approach that comes to my mind was: Connect the QLineEdit to a slot and when the value changes emit the value to the QFrame. The next one is using signals and connect them: class Window : QWidget { Q_OBJECT // Some code... QSignalMapper *mapper; public slots: void onSignalMapperChanged(int val) { m_lineEdit->setText(QString::number(val)); } void onSignalEmitterChanged() { emit lineEmitterChanged(m_lineEdit->text()); } } But the problem is that I can't define a slot inside another one. I know that I could use signals and connect them manually, but that's
