GlamorousPg Troy Oct 10, 2017 at 12:09 PM enQ: QDialog passing objects to derived classes I have a class which inherits from QDialog, the class accepts a string in constructor. When the user press OK button in the QDialog, the text should be sent to the baseclass and when the dialog is closed the baseclass object should send the file name to its derived object. I'm trying to achieve this using signal and slots but i don't know how to signal the baseclass and send the object to the slot in derived class here is the code i have so far: class BaseFileDialog : public QDialog { Q_OBJECT public: BaseFileDialog(const QString &str,const QString &filter,QDialog::Options options,QWidget *parent=NULL); virtual ~BaseFileDialog(); void setItems(const QString &str); QString getItems() const; QString getFilename() const; QString selectedFileName() const; QString selectedItem() const; signals: void itemChanged(const QString &); }; class DerivedFileDialog : public BaseFileDialog { public: DerivedFileDialog(const QString &str, const QString &filter, QDialog::Options options, QWidget *parent=NULL) : BaseFileDialog(str,filter,options,parent) { } virtual ~DerivedFileDialog(); void setItems(const QString &str) { QString items = str; emit itemChanged(items); BaseFileDialog::set bff6bb2d33
