This year, the “HyperMotion” initiative returns to support players and fans around the world by delivering FIFA, in ways which they’re never seen before. Spencer Sutherland, Producer of FIFA 22: “The technology we’ve pioneered for FIFA’s gameplay is at the heart of our all-new ‘HyperMotion’ initiative for FIFA 22. We’ve seen some incredible innovations in the past year, including the likes of the complete and total reimagining of the FIFA Ultimate Team – and our award-winning FIFA Mobile – but we’re already in the midst of creating the most immersive and open-ended football game in history.” “We have some of the most creative and dedicated men and women working on FIFA across the globe, but we know that our first and most important audience are our players,” continued Sutherland. “We’re excited to launch the full contents of the next-generation FIFA gameplay, which uses the highly-detailed data collected from real-life players in motion capture suits to push the boundaries of what’s possible in football, while still being beautiful and fun to play. And ultimately, we want to create a truly authentic experience that gives players of all types the opportunity to celebrate their successes on and off the pitch.” “We’re releasing an enhanced FIFA experience for the latest generation consoles, smartphones and personal computers, which is based on the innovative technology we developed for FIFA 19. This includes an all-new football engine, refined gameplay and emotional artificial intelligence that allows the game to fully understand and respond to the information from the player.” Alongside the game’s multi-platform release on 27 August, fans can experience the next-generation gameplay for the first time when players visit the brand new FIFA Social Club at the FIFA 19 Windows Store release. The Social Club will let players access exclusive game experiences in a variety of ways, all of which have been created especially for the forthcoming title. In the Hub, fans will be able to chat in a streamlined interface and learn more about the latest new experiences and insights into the gameplay, such as how the new game engine works, new features and experiences, and more. Fan Gossip. Fans of the world’s most popular game mode can now watch the top class pundits, including Paul Scholes, Graeme Souness, Gordon Illingworth,
