The effect of the NADPH-generating uncoupler 2,4-dinitrophenol on amphetamine-stimulated release of [3H]noradrenaline and [3H]serotonin from rat brain cortical slices was investigated. 2,4-Dinitrophenol (10 mM) significantly increased the release of [3H]noradrenaline elicited by 25 mM K+ from 514±25 to 721±86 dpm/mg protein (mean±S.E.M.; P less than 0.01) and the release elicited by 25 mM K+ from 10.25±1.71 to 14.65±1.89 dpm/mg protein (P less than 0.01). 2,4-Dinitrophenol (10 mM) also significantly enhanced the release of [3H]serotonin elicited by 10 mM K+ from 0.83±0.10 to 1.35±0.13 dpm/mg protein (P less than 0.05). Amphetamine (1 mM) had no significant effect on the release of [3H]noradrenaline (P less than 0.05) or [3H]serotonin (P less than 0.05) from rat brain cortical slices in the absence of
