Show moreTarget-selective activation of mesohepatocytes in cytotoxic necrotizing-hepatitis animal models. Specific targeting of liver cells is required for the treatment of various liver disorders including infections, cancers, and metabolic and autoimmune liver diseases. Efficient targeting of liver cells would require a methodology to identify target cells among the heterogeneous population of hepatocytes. Here, we demonstrate that mesohepatocytes can be selectively activated by cytotoxic necrotizing-hepatitis virus (CNHV), compared with hepatocytes, using our recently developed method of peptide arrays and in vivo phage display. In addition, we showed that in vivo selection with CNHV-derived peptides can be applied to the purification of cell types from non-targeted mouse liver tissues.Q: MongoDB $unwind with $match and group I have the following document: { "_id" : "6bfd62cd9f90f143a82762be", "points_totals" : { "points" : [{ "date" : { "epoch" : 1546086662, "millis" : 1546086662 }, "round" : 1, b7e8fd5c8
