In battle the blue bar is your health and the red is your current ability. More damage has more red. When your abilities refresh to green you get to use them for a limited amount of time, so play it safe with these. A Blade of Light By: Novevangelist | March 6, 2017 So far I have progressed very slowly as I am new to this game. I have learned all there is to know from studying, I've gone through the starter tutorial, and I have 3 classes so far and I still have no idea what they all do. A Blade of Light By: Novevangelist | March 6, 2017 This review contains spoilers, click expand to view. Since this is a MMO, there are a lot of things to get used to. The controls are wonky at first because you can't click to move your camera and when fighting, there's no numpad. The combat system will take a bit to get used to. The enemies have no range nor aggro. They just stand there. As you kill an enemy, any enemy within a radius of 50 squares of the player, will get aggro and fight to kill the player. At first, enemies didn't seem to have any sort of resistances and thus are easy to kill. The vendors, I can't figure out what they sell. To me it looks like they have spells and stuff... But are they actually selling spells? The spells require certain items to be equipped to be used. Also, while I had a merchant sell me a feather dagger, I've yet to find a feather dagger. On top of all that there are a lot of things that don't make sense. I've died in dozens of places in quest maps and dungeons where I have no idea where the enemies came from. It's a Dungeon Crawl kind of game, so I don't know if its a poorly designed dungeon or just not explained properly. I've read that I don't need any of the skills to level up. Its also not at all explained why some enemies have more strength than others. On my first playthrough I got stuck on a mini boss and the strength and HP of my enemies did not make any sense. At best they would've been 5. On my third playthrough I tried to go over the boss again and this time I got myself killed. My attack was stronger than the boss's. The only explanation I could think of is bff6bb2d33
