[29] This assertion is apparently confirmed by the petition of the National Labor Relations Board on behalf of the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association to enjoin the respondents, in which it was alleged that the union, pursuant to its instructions, agreed that no strike would be called until April 15, 1945. [30] An attempt was made on April 19 to discuss the contract between National Labor Relations Board representatives and the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association. The negotiations were discontinued for the reason that the board representatives advised the Association's representatives that, since the matter of the subcontract was still under consideration, they were under the impression that their contract did not contemplate a settlement of that matter. On April 21 the Board's representatives stated to the Association's negotiators that the union was unwilling to agree to a settlement of the subcontracting question in the negotiations which had been discontinued. The negotiations were continued on April 26, 27, and April 28. They were again resumed on May 3, on which date the representatives of the Association stated that if the Union would agree to permit the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association to apply to the General Electric Company for a subcontracting clause in the electricians' contract, it would agree to the settlement of the others. The Board representatives replied that the Union was unwilling to accept the suggested settlement and requested to be permitted to consider it. On May 5 the parties again met, and on May 7 the Board's representatives stated that they found it impossible to reach an understanding with the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association and requested additional time. They stated that they would not agree to accept a settlement until agreement had been reached, and they requested the assistance of this Court. On May 14 they advised that no settlement was possible.
