Its available free.Q: Korean Characters in Visual Studio Project I am developing web application using Visual Studio. I have a TextBox in my form which has Korean characters in it. When I try to validate the textbox with Regex, it throws an exception Input string was not in a correct format. I tried to encode Korean characters but it does not work. I also tried using Korean (Windows 10) System but same problem exists. This is the sample Korean character: Is there a way to automatically encode Korean characters to ASCII? A: Data validation is not sufficient to handle this problem You should convert it to some other character format before using it. You can modify app.config in your WPF project. Look here Make sure that your output encoding matches the encoding defined in the value for the httpRuntime tag in the app.config file (the default is utf-8) You can include the following lines in your app.config file Alternatively, you can modify System.Web/Compilation/Debug/AspNetCompiler.cs (you will have to decompile the ASP.NET 2.0 files) It may take some time to replace the characters encoding from utf-16/16-bit to a UTF-8 encoding, so you may want to switch to start_up instead of start. .
