The minimum wage rate from April 2016 has been increased by 13.8% bringing it to £7.20 per hour for all workers aged 21 and over in England. The increase will impact around 2.2 million workers, an estimated 66% of workers who receive the National Minimum Wage. BBC News contacted the Department for Work and Pensions for comment but received no response. A working group set up to find a solution to the national minimum wage issue also met in 2013 but did not produce any recommendations for the government. The national minimum wage was increased in 2011 in line with the increase in the Retail Prices Index (RPI) inflation rate of 3.8%. But in 2015 the government effectively froze the rate, instead increasing the amount of National Living Wage it pays in addition to the National Minimum Wage, and delayed any increase to the National Minimum Wage for any employers whose April 2016 pay package exceeded £10 an hour. Château de Sainte-Brine The Château de Sainte-Brine (Brine Castle) is a neo-gothic castle in the commune of Laval in the department of Deux-Sèvres in the region of Nouvelle-Aquitaine in France. The castle was the site of the Battle of Sainte-Brine in 1207, in which Renaud de Brienne, count of Dammartin, had broken his oath of fealty to the king of France and then reneged on his oath of neutrality and given his support to the
