Nearly half the people in Minnesota this year are Democrats, making it the first state in the Midwest to switch blue to red in a presidential election year. Only Florida has flipped so far, and Obama won it over Romney by 2 million votes, with the latest returns suggesting a Romney victory in the state. Minnesota gives Obama the state's seven electoral college votes and is a key state for both candidates. Before the election, Barack Obama was seen as the favorite to win it and captured it by 2.5 percentage points. Shortly after he won Minnesota, Obama blamed his loss in part on voter suppression, claiming that Republicans had kept voters from turning out to vote. But there's no evidence that a voter suppression effort impacted the outcome of this election. It's harder to observe if there was suppression against a large minority in the Democratic base – Latinos and African-Americans. According to Census Bureau estimates, Latino and African-American people make up nearly 30 percent of Minnesota's population. The Republican campaign in Minnesota, led by candidate Todd Akin, highlighted jobs and the economy as a key issue, and they claimed Obama did not have a plan to create jobs. The state had an unemployment rate of 7.2 percent in November, with numerous employers reporting shortages of skilled workers. Akin also touched on the controversial topic of abortion in Minnesota. With a Democratic-controlled state senate and an overwhelmingly Democratic-controlled house, it became a hotly debated issue that resulted in Governor Dayton's forced cancellation of the state's license to perform abortion. A 2012 study by researchers at North Dakota State University found that Minnesota women were less likely to have an abortion when given access to public health insurance. After the election, a supporter of President Obama in Minnesota said he thought the state's swing vote votes in the 2008 election were influenced by the relatively high level of state government funding for abortion. After the election, that state representative who supported abortion was also known as "Mr. 80-20." He worked to get more of the state's funding for abortion-caused deaths and injuries. Minnesota was one of two states where the health commissioner refused to recommend that the Affordable Care Act be offered to the state's citizens. It's an issue that was a major difference between Democrats and Republicans in the state. The state, like others in the Midwest, has a history of immigration. As a result, it's been a swing state for Democrats and Republicans.

Q: How can I import multiple system paths to Cloud9 workspace? When I create a project on Cloud9 I do this: $ cd my-app-name $ cloud9 workspace create my-app-name $ cloud9 workspace install ruby-1.9.3-p194 But now if I do

$ cd ~/temp/my-app-name then go to the Cloud9 workspace via: $ cloud9 workspace run To see that I have $ source $CLOUD9_IDE_PATH/etc/profile I can do $ source /home/jle/temp/my-app-name/etc/profile And then $ ruby -v works! But if I do $ source /usr/local/bin/clang it fails with this: $ source /usr/local/bin/clang -bash: /usr/local/bin/clang: No such file or directory If I navigate to /usr/local/bin on the filesystem, it's there. EDIT: I'm an idiot I get it now. The way Cloud9 is setup it will look for your system paths from /etc/profile, which means that anything in /etc/profile will be your path on that workspace. I'll submit a bug to have this fixed asap. A: The simplest method would be just to add the path to the.profile in the newly created workspace. source $(/usr/bin/env cd) will work too. Re: My new adventure for a spell!!! Hi Bonnie, thanks for your offer of friendship.I would love to get to know everyone and maybe even write you back, if you've any time! Tell me about your family and I'll tell you about mine. Trust me, there's still room for one more, if you're up for it! I'm Mel; I'm from Texas, here's a pic, maybe a bit self-portraitish, but if you say "go ahead" I might draw one for you, if you're into it. My sons are grown and I spend my time with my grandchildren...I'm addicted to snow skiing, and I still watch all the old Disney movies, with my "boy" grandson. I enjoy gardening and photography, but not very well.I've had several dogs that I had to say good-bye to, and I
