I wrote a simple self-drawn mathematical image for illustrating an idea that I want to visualize in a publication and I would like to add a space around the image, like this (source: How would I do that? A: A simple way is adding a column of white space between two symbols. You can easily do this using array, which allows you to create an array of numbers.

Q: iOS, remove tabs in UITabBarController dynamically I have a tab bar controller with 4 different tabs; What I want to do is dynamically remove the tab bar buttons, when the content that the tabs are used for changes. For example: tab1. I have an image view where the user adds media from the iphone gallery. tab2. I have a view controller, with information about the user, the media they have added, etc. tab3. Removes tab1, and adds new media. How would I accomplish something like this? Thanks A: Given that you've already subclassed UITabBarController, you just need to implement the code
